

THE OPEN AIR MUSEUM

Let's get out of town for a while. If we take the train we get to the Open Air Museum in no time. The Open Air Museum is like a big park with farms and mills from the old days. We can walk right into all the houses, and see how people lived hundreds of years ago. Everything in the museum houses is smaller than the houses of today. If I lie in one of the beds, my tail will fall out. Also, remember to tell your parents that they must bow their heads when walking through the doors, or they will bang their heads into the doorframes.

The Open Air Museum Park also has a lot of farm animals. We can pet the horses or go for a ride. We can smell the pigs or just look at the sheeps, goats, chickens, geese, ducks and cows. What do you think? I'll wait at the playground until you are ready.

• FACTS

The Open Air Museum ("Frilandsmuseet"), established in 1897, is one of the world's oldest and largest open-air museums. All buildings have been painstakingly disassembled at their original locations and reassembled at the museum. The farmhouses illustrate life in the countryside from 1650 to about 1950.
